

ABSTRACT

The present invention comprises methods and systems for consummating transactions based on transactional histories in a biometric verification system. More specifically, it only consummates transactions if authorization is received when a flag is set against identification data. Alternatively, it consummates transactions if with rapid approval if sufficient credits have been accumulated for rapid approval whereby authorization from a third party or remote server is not required.